Description
Dressed in a painting smock, Elizabeth Siddal sits at an easel, her hair coiffed and to the side. Her right hand holds a pain brush. On the easel is a canvas with a sketch of a sitting woman under a bare tree. Her left hand is resting on her lap, holding more drawing instruments. In the background is a window with a decorative glass pane fashioned with concentric circles. Sunligh shines through the room hitting the easel and Siddal's face.
